Today the stage is set.
The stroke of midnight the curtain begins to rise.
The call of one is heard upon the platform.

And it is you.

We all are observers waiting,
watching.

For your first movement, your first words, your direction to us all.

What will you do? What will you say?

Who will you invite upon the stage to share in your play?

Choose well and choose wisely.

But by all means choose.

Do not allow a single curtain to fall upon a single day.

Without stepping to the stage to live
your life your way.
